GOVERNMENT OF INDIA
TERMINABLE LOAN.

NOTICE AS TO THE CONDITIONS ON WHICH THE PUBLIC MAY SUBSCRIBE THROUGH THE POST OFFICE.

The Government are raising this year's loan in a new form carrying 4 per cent. interest. It will be repaid in full not later than November 1923, but Government can repay it if they wish any time after October, 1920.

2. Rs. 4½ crores have already been raised in the usual way by the receipt of applications at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay and other large centres, and, so far, the loan is now closed. But in addition a special opportunity is being given to persons who wish to take up the loan in small amounts, whether they are savings bank depositors or not, of subscribing through the nearest post office which transacts savings bank business.

HOW TO SUBSCRIBE.

3. Applications through the post office can be made any time up to the 30th October.

4. Applications must be for even hundreds of rupees and for not less than Rs. 100 and not more, in the case of any one applicant, than Rs. 5,000.

NOTE.—An applicant may apply for the new loan up to Rs. 5,000, notwithstanding that he already holds 2½ per cent. Promissory notes previously purchased through the Post Office.

5. A person desiring to apply must fill up the form below which can also be obtained at any post office which transacts savings bank business. He must at the same time pay the full amount for which he applies. For this purpose he can use the money in his savings bank account if he is a savings bank depositor, or he can pay in cash direct. The applicant may go to the post office himself or send a messenger. All amounts paid will be acknowledged.

6. For every Rs. 100 which the applicant pays he will receive Government Promissory notes for the same amount.

CUSTODY OF PROMISSORY NOTES.

7. The notes may either be kept by the applicant in his own custody or, if he prefers, they may be retained in the custody of the post office authorities on his behalf. He should state which method he prefers in filling up the form of application. If he wishes to keep the notes himself, the post office will advise him when they are ready for delivery, and, on his presenting himself personally, they will be made over to him. If he decides to leave them with the post office, his personal attendance will not again be required, but the post office will send him an intimation in due course that they have been received and are held on his behalf. Should he at a later date desire to keep the notes himself, they will then be made over to him.

PAYMENT OF INTEREST.

8. Interest at 4 per cent. a year will be paid half-yearly, i.e. 2 per cent. on the 31st May and 2 per cent. on the 30th November every year. For the broken period from the date of subscription to the 30th November next, interest will be paid in cash at the time, the Promissory notes are delivered if the applicant keeps them himself, or will be credited into the saving bank account mentioned in the next paragraph if he leaves the notes in the custody of the post office authorities.

9. If the applicant decides to leave his Promissory notes in the custody of the post office authorities, the latter will draw the interest for him regularly each half year and credit the amount into a saving bank account which will be opened for this purpose in his name. The post office will also inform him from time to time whenever interest is thus received. No charge will be levied for this service, and no income tax will be deducted in making the half-yearly payments of interest.

If he keeps the Promissory notes himself, income tax will be deducted from interest in the usual way at the time the half-yearly payments are made.

SALE OF PROMISSORY NOTES.

10. If at any time a savings bank depositor who holds Promissory notes in this new loan, which have been purchased through the post office by the procedure here described, desires to sell them again, or any part of them, the post office will arrange this for him without charging brokerage or other fees. Full particulars as to this can be obtained from the post office at any time.

NOTICE.

UNDER instructions from our client Mr. J. P. KATHOKE, Wine Merchant, of Parsee Bazar Street, Fort, Bombay, Agent for Messrs. J. DENIS, HENRY MOUNIE & Co., of Cognac, France, Public Notice of the undermentioned judgment obtained by our clients' principals in France is given.

FRAUD.

On the 20th August 1915, the TRIBUNAL of COMMERCE in COGNAC, department of Charente, in the Republic of France, delivered the following judgment against Messrs. RODDE & MONTANGON, of Segonzac near Cognac, who sold Brandy, especially on the Bombay market, under a brand "HENRY MOUNIE" having by itself no commercial value.

The judgment was delivered in favour of Messrs. J. DENIS, HENRY MOUNIE & Co., who prosecuted, and which states that Messrs. RODDE & MONTANGON have wilfully imitated the colour and emblems of the label used by Messrs. J. DENIS, HENRY MOUNIE & Co., in taking a name "HENRY MOUNIE," and that this proceeding constitutes a disloyal competition, that their label with golden bottom and white letters is a colourable imitation of the golden vine leaf with white letters used by Messrs. J. DENIS, HENRY MOUNIE & Co., for the purpose of deceiving buyers.

Consequently Messrs. RODDE & MONTANGON are sentenced to suppress the name "HENRY MOUNIE" on all their bottles of brandy, cases, casks and commercial papers in their possession, or in the hands of their buyers. They are further prohibited from using in future the name of "HENRY MOUNIE" in any form whatever, all labels bearing the name "HENRY MOUNIE" are to be forfeited and destroyed, and all registrations which might have been made of this name are to be cancelled, this suppression being made immediately, under penalty of 250 francs per day to be paid by Messrs. RODDE & MONTANGON. The TRIBUNAL, furthermore, sentences Messrs. RODDE & MONTANGON to pay 250 francs, with interest, the cost of proceedings and of insertion of the judgment in four foreign papers at the choice of Messrs. J. DENIS, HENRY MOUNIE & Co.

Further notice is hereby given that all persons found infringing the label or trademark complained of by our clients' principals and referred to in the above judgment will be dealt with according to Law.

Dated this 22nd day of October, 1915.

1. THE POLICE DOG No. 2.

A Comic Cartoon from the famous Bray Studios. You remember the Pinkerton Pup, this one is even better.

Police Officer Piffle seeks relaxation from his labours by taking a plunge in the briny. A hungry shark, on the look-out for prey, has a game with the "bobby", and a merry chase follows. The Pinkerton pup decides to teach Piffle a lesson and makes off with officer's "pants." He carries them to a "pop" shop close by, and endeavours to raise a bit on them. The pawnbroker does not see his way to doing a loan, so the pup decides to try the butcher, who comes to terms giving a large, juicy stake for Piffle's bags. Meanwhile the gallant officer and the shark fight it out to a finish. The shark is glad to get rid of his tormentor, who looks in vain for his trousers. Piffle substitutes a barrel for his missing garment. The barrel is a tight fit, which fact is noted by "Billy" Goat, who, with a well-directed butt, sends Piffle rolling towards the police station, where he finally lands on the top of his superior. Charged with assault and conduct unbecoming to the Force, Piffle is left to the languish and soliloquise (somewhat sulphuretically) in a lonely cell.

3. TYPICAL JAPANESE DANCES.

Like every other country under the sun, Japan has its typical dances which are performed on special occasions of rejoicing, although naturally partaking of the curious plastic nature of all Oriental movement. Danced by a group of quaint little Japanese maidens, we are shown in succession, in this extremely interesting film, the following dances: The Scarf Dance, a graceful, not un-European measure; a Wedding Dance; the Umbrella Dance; the Hana Nomaki, or Dance of Springtime and, finally, the Nippon Banzai, or national patriotic dance. Probably all these dances have their special symbolism to the Japanese mind; and if that escapes the Westerners they nevertheless provide material for a remarkable and uncommon production.

MADRAS BENCHES OF HONORARY MAGISTRATES.

PROBLEM OF JUVENILE CRIME.

(NEWS BUREAU.)

MADRAS, Oct. 22.

The report of Criminal Courts last year says that development of the Benches of Honorary Magistrates was much attended to, but no result was visible. The number was raised from 82 to 95, of which 9 exercise first class powers, besides being authorised to try through-out taluqs. A further increase is under consideration. The District Magistrate's attention has been drawn to the desirability of bringing petty cases for summary trial and that it is no longer necessary that Benches should be instituted only at the head-quarters of Stipendiary Magistrates.

With regard to the punishment of juveniles the Government observe an increase in the number of released in 1914 under section 562, I.P.C., or punished by whipping and decrease in imprisonment. One juvenile offender has been sentenced to more stripes than the law allowed for the offence under section 378, I.P.C. The question of law dealing with juveniles is under consideration of the Government.

BOMBAY AMUSEMENTS.

EXCELSIOR THEATRE.

"ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA."

"Antony and Cleopatra" which is being shown at the Excelsior this week, beginning to-night, is another of those ambitious and elaborate productions which cause one to wonder more than anything else at the degree of perfection to which the cinematographer has brought his art. Like "Quo Vadis" and "Cabiria" (which by the way was produced in London for the first time in this week, though one still hears that Bombay is always a twelvemonth behind the times, "Antony and Cleopatra" is a series of spectacles, gorgeous in themselves and perfectly presented through the medium of the camera; secondly, a great historical reconstruction, giving the most faithful picture possible of the age with which it deals; thirdly, it is a noble and impressive drama, recounting the story of two of the world's greatest lovers. Considered in any of these lights, the film is almost wholly satisfying, though it is, perhaps, as a spectacle that it is most astonishing, and most certain to win for itself wonder and admiration. The staging, stage management and general production of the picture are examples of the very highest kind of art, and offer final proof, if any proof be needed, that the cinematograph drama is a form of art second to none in its boundless possibilities.

This great film is 8,000 feet in length and will occupy the entire Excelsior programme. It gives a vivid idea of the life of the Egyptian Court, with Cleopatra at its head, from the time Mark Antony, entering the land in triumph, demands that Cleopatra shall pay homage to the Roman eagle, to that day when with Cleopatra and Antony both dead, Octavius avenges the honour of the Roman Empire. Live crocodiles, lions and leopards are employed to ensure the reality of the scenes in which they appear. The onerous part of Cleopatra is wonderfully well played by Signora P. Twerthoff Gonzoles, one of Italy's foremost actresses, and that of Antony by Signor Novelli who scored such a success in "Quo Vadis." There is a temptation at first to take offence at the fulsomeness of Signora Gonzoles, but the part is in keeping with the Cleopatra of Shakespeare's imagination, and presents a truly impressive portrait of this "crowned courtesan," the very essence of old Oriental splendour and voluptuousness. We can heartily recommend those who enjoyed "Quo Vadis" and "Cabiria" to "Antony and Cleopatra." To-night at 9.30 p.m. The Bandmann Gaiety Co. present for the last time "Come Inside" and although, perhaps, the title does not convey much more than an invitation, it is an exceedingly amusing trifle and shows a splendid travesty on the making of a Revue, the principal scene being laid in "Revue Factory," which is a ripple of vermicot from start to finish.

IMPERIAL CINEMA.

The great film of "The Perils of Pauline" has at last arrived at its concluding stages as the 14th and 15th episodes are to be shown this week. There will now remain only five more chapters to be unravelled in the life of the popular Pauline. Those who have followed the picture from the very beginning will welcome the present episodes as they will certainly come up to their expectations, and those who have not yet seen this wonderful film will do well to start it from this week.

The fourteenth episode of "The Perils of Pauline" is photographically one of the best which has yet been turned out. There is not a blur or flicker in the entire two thousand feet. It contains few close-ups, but more are not necessary, for this episode, even more than the others, depends upon its quick action, rather than emotional expression, to "put over" its climax. The big sensation of the picture is the real enactment of a stunt that has been the thriller in many a melodrama. It is the cutting of a wire extended across a chasm on which the pursued are attempting to escape, allowing them to fall to certain death below. In this case, the certain death is averted by the victims falling into a narrow river. More than plain nerve is necessary to attempt this feat, and accomplish it without serious injury. The least error in judgment as to just how far out the pursued should be before the wire is cut, would mean that they would fall on either side of the narrow stream, which in all probability would result in a fatality, considering the great height at which the wire is stretched.

For a little diversion from her experiences in the last four of five chapters, Pearl White is allowed to "peril" through the fifteenth episode without being either kidnapped or roughly handled. She is exposed to dangers, of course, but Providence assumes the responsibility heretofore allotted to Craze Wilbur, and rescues her by removing the hazardous results of Owen's schemes. An automobile race embodies the greater amount of action, and it is clearly photographed and startling in its realism. More so, in fact than anything yet seen in the series, with the exception of the steeplechase in the thirteenth episode.

The programme includes a comic cartoon by Bray. These cartoons have made a great hit lately and this one is undoubtedly a laughter maker from one end to the other. Another coloured comedy by Willes is also announced and the programme closes with that indispensable film Pathe's Animated Gazette.

NEW ALEXANDRA CINEMA.

Emboldened by the huge success that attended the screening of the sensational film "Neptune's Daughter" last week, the enterprising management of the above picture house are screening this week, a thrill

ALLEGED THEFT OF ORNAMENTS BY A DAUGHTER.

APPLICATION FOR TRANSFER REFUSED.

At the Esplanade Police Court, yesterday, the Chief Presidency Magistrate disposed of a notice matter in which Inspector Sykwas, at the instance of Danyantibhai, a Hindu lady, called upon to show cause why the case, in which he charged her with the theft of ornaments, valued at Rs. 50.99, alleged to be the property of her father, Mr. Dwarakadas Lalubhai, should not be transferred from the Court of the Second Presidency Magistrate to that of any other Court. Mr. Weldon, barrister, in support of the notice, while Mr. Bowen, for Mr. Lalubhai, T. Desai, appeared for the defence, Mr. Little & Co., solicitors, appeared to show cause on behalf of the Public Prosecutor.

Danyantibhai alleged that sometime ago her father made a complaint to the Police charging her with stealing the ornaments, and the Police, on receiving the complaint, charged her with theft before the Second Presidency Magistrate. She further alleged that the Second Presidency Magistrate was on terms of friendship with her father, and that he was on terms of friendship with the Second Presidency Magistrate, and that she could not get justice in the Court of the Second Presidency Magistrate, and she applied for a transfer of the case.

After Mr. Weldon had argued in support of the application, Mr. Bowen put in affidavits in behalf of Mr. Dwarakadas Lalubhai, at which it was not true that Mr. Dwarakadas was on terms of friendship with the Second Presidency Magistrate, and that she could not get justice in the Court of the Second Presidency Magistrate, and she applied for a transfer of the case.

The Chief Presidency Magistrate, in disposing of the application, said that after looking into the explanation given by the Second Presidency Magistrate, and after hearing Counsel for both sides, he was satisfied that there were no grounds for transfer. He refused to grant the application for transfer.

Ingwar drama, entitled "Through the Envy's Lines." It is a story of the present great European War, told in a series of highly realistic and very ambitious scenes, admirably carried out. The most noteworthy point in the drama is the magnificent scale upon which the numerous battle scenes have been conceived and carried out. Each, realism and an altogether praise-worthy attention to detail are apparent in every incident, and we may safely assume that the arrangement of the military dispositions and the wonderful fighting pictures were directed by some one whose knowledge of such matters was not confined to the reduction of an effective scope in a screen drama. There is life and movement and an appreciation of the true sense of the drama, in every scene, and the very which runs through it helps the more tense situations not a little. The acting of the principle characters too, under circumstances that are at times somewhat trying, all that could be desired, whilst the reality of action holds the attention from first to last. It tells a story of war and ruin, of the desolation that follows the fall of the Hun, and of the apparently intangible iniquities and debauchery of officers and men in the German Army. Some of the incidents, indeed, showing the fighting trenches and at close quarters are as well done as real. The Nordisk Company, who does things by halves. Another attraction in this week's programme, is a roving comedy, featuring the prince of comedians, Charles Chaplin, in the picture "The World in His Musical Career."

BASEBALL.

Those who witnessed the game of Baseball which took place last Sunday afternoon on the Bombay Gymkhana ground, dispersed after two hours of exciting interest in the match. The struggle was between teams representing the well-known Japanese firm Mitsui Bussan Kaisha and the Bombay Gymkhana, the result being a win for the Gymkhana team by 20 runs to 6. An excellent win indeed, as the Japanese team was a strong favourite before the match started. Both teams received much encouragement from their many partisans, and the interest never lagged from the time the umpire, Mr. Yoshimoto called "Play Ball" with the Japanese team taking the field, and Sherwood opening out the stick work for the Gymkhana team, until a last double play by the Gymkhana fielders blighted the hopes of a batting rally.

The Japanese team in their last appearance at the Gymkhana, during which time, the spectators watched the ball travelling fast and far from the impact of the players' bats and from the speedy throwing by both sides. Kaneko was selected to pitch for the Japanese team and Johnson for the Gymkhana. The toss was won by the men from Nippon, and as they elected to take the field, the Gymkhana was first to bat. Kaneko started briskly at once, and before Kaneko and his eight colleagues were able to check the advance of the opponents, the Gymkhana had registered 5 runs. The Gymkhana team then took the field and made easy put outs of the first two men of the Mitsui team, but after that, all did not go well with the Gymkhana men, and 3 runs were scored before the necessary "third out" could be made to finish the first inning. Score 8 to 3. In the second inning, neither team was able to score a run, the first three batters on each side being put out in regular order through sharp fielding by both sides. Score 8 to 3. Starting the first half of the third inning, Kilby failed to hit three good throws, but Hawkins later scored a run after getting on base by good judgment in cutting while Kaneko threw him four wide pitches. In the last half of the inning, the Mitsui team were again put out in one, two, three order, the score now standing 9 to 3.

Brown opened the fourth inning by hitting a high one to left field which was cleverly held by Kitamura. Washburn then hit safely, and scored a run on a screaming smash to left field by Simms, the ball rolling to the tents on Esplanade road, this hit going for a "home-run." The next two Gymkhana men were easily retired. Yegawa scored for the Mitsui team after hitting safely to centre-field, but three of his team mates were not as successful, and were put out. Score 11 to 4. In the fifth inning, Hawkins, Sherwood and Johnson scored for the Gymkhana, and Kaneko for the Mitsui team, but two of his team mates failed to hit the ball at all. Score 14 to 5. As in the first half of the second inning, the Gymkhana men failed to make a score in the 6th. When the Japanese came to bat, Sherwood replaced Johnson as pitcher for the Gymkhana. Seven batters faced him, Kusumana scoring a run. Yano failed to hit the ball for the third man out, leaving one of his team mates standing on each base ready to romp home. Score 14 to 6. In the 7th and last inning of the game, the Gymkhana team got their bats swinging freely again, resulting in the scoring of 6 runs, Nicholson hitting the ball safely and making his first tally of the day. With one man out, and one on base, a double play by the Gymkhana ended matters, and gave them an easy victory.

SURAT GAMBLING CASE.

ACCUSED'S APPEAL REJECTED.

(NEWS BUREAU.)

SURAT, Oct. 22.
The District Judge rejected both appeals of Kikabhai and confirmed the sentence of six weeks' imprisonment and fine of Rs. 100.

LATER.
Mr. C. N. Mehta, the District and Session Judge, was engaged for the last two days in hearing arguments in the appeal preferred by Kikabhai Tayabji. In this case it will be remembered, the City Magistrate convicted and sentenced the accused Kika to six weeks' simple imprisonment for keeping a common gaming house, and fined him Rs. 100 for gaming. On Wednesday Mr. Velinker for the accused finished his arguments and on Thursday Mr. Gandhi, Government pleader, argued the case for the police.

The District Judge in giving judgment to-day observed that he did not see any illegality in the order made by the Magistrate in sanctioning the police to investigate after the complaint was lodged. The accused was not thereby prejudiced. He held that the house was used as a common gaming house. Evidence proved that it was Kika who rented the house and that Kika used to charge one pie per rupee from all winning gamblers and his daily earnings varied from Rs. 25 to Rs. 250 and that he used to advance money to gamblers for the purpose of gaming. His Honour remarked that he had no hesitation in saying that an unbecoming and mean attempt was made on behalf of the appellant to win over on his side prosecution witnesses, but fortunately the attempt failed. He agreed with the Magistrate that the documents and accounts produced by the defence were sham documents. Stress was laid that that was the accused's first conviction and that he was 72 years old, but the Magistrate considered those matters. Having regard to the extensive scale on which the appellant hitherto succeeded in conducting his nefarious business which brought him daily profits of Rs. 25 to 250, he agreed with the Magistrate that no amount of fine would meet the ends of justice and the sentence of six weeks' simple imprisonment was just and he confirmed it and rejected the appeal.

SELF-GOVERNMENT.

We published the other day some extracts from leading articles in the English press commenting upon the question of India's representation in the Imperial Conference. The keynote of these comments was the sympathetic recognition of the rightness of India's claim, not only to participation in the deliberations of the Conference, but also to a more substantial share in the management of her own domestic affairs. As the "Manchester Guardian" wrote,

"India is making advances in self-government, and it is not only for her own benefit but in the interests of the general stability of the Empire that these advances should continue until by degrees she acquires substantial control of her own internal affairs."

There is nothing new in this statement, except the spirit behind it. That spirit is the product of the war. And it is necessary to remind ourselves from time to time of what we are all,—India no less than England, her Dependencies and Allies,—fighting for. It is that, not only should international obligations be respected, but that her ideals of justice and liberty should be vindicated even in the case of the smallest people. The question which every thinking Indian, who is a real patriot, is asking himself to-day is whether his own country will share in the general liberation which the war must bring to Europe; whether the English people, who are now fighting for the ideal of freedom and equality of treatment against the Prussian idea of subjection and discipline, will realise in a far more practical and real manner than hitherto that the former is a better and more lasting cement than the latter; whether in short, remembering their bold and statesmanlike experiment with their erstwhile enemies in South Africa, which vindicated the principle of union through liberty that has been the guiding motive of the best English statesmanship,—they will repeat that experiment with India. If they fail to do so, if imagination and sympathy do not become the keynote of their attitude towards India, her people may feel that the war has been partly fought in vain. Fortunately signs are not wanting to show that such a contingency is remote. The best minds in England, who have for many years been accustomed to think of India as a fellow-community with themselves, have begun to recognise, to a greater degree than formerly, her growing claims to a voice box in her own affairs and in all Imperial problems that touch her interests. The latest among those who are not afraid to face the problem of India's future is Sir Frank Forbes Adam, a former president both of the Bank of Bombay and of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce. Presiding at the opening of a museum at Ribchester which is to house some relics of Roman times, he reminded his audience, which was composed of members of the archaeological section of the British Association, then meeting at Manchester, of one great circumstance equally applicable to the Roman and the British systems of Empire. During certain periods of Roman history, he said, their access in governing their Empire was in great measure due to the fact that they established local self-government in certain provinces. England has established self-government in or colony after another with great and conspicuous success, and they saw the result,—the sons of all these colonies flocking to the assistance of the Mother Country in the present war. One country, he continued, alone remained that he not yet obtained self-government—a country that had been called "the rightest gem in the Imperial Crown," and that was India.

It had lived many years in India, and during all those years there had been a steady movement towards the day when the inhabitants of India would be able to govern themselves. It might be a long time coming, because there were many peculiarities to be studied, but he had no hesitation in saying that the splendid exhibition of patriotism and loyalty of the Princes and Peoples of India during the last twelve months made it certain that as soon as the war was over a great effort would be made to advance towards the goal which everyone who loved India had in view.

This declaration, it is gratifying to note, was received with applause. And it refers to a point whose significance is not sufficiently realised. It is true that the war has helped England, as well as the Dominions, to see things as a whole and to regard India more as a member of the Big British family, in whom they, no less than the founders of the East India Company, should take a family pride. But to say that India's soldiers are fairly winning for her her rightful status among the other great constituent units of the Empire is to base India's claim to self-government on a mere sentimental consideration,—albeit a very proper and strong consideration. As "The Times" said, "India has valiantly aided us and in doing so has proudly dismissed all thought of reward." But the "Ottawa Free Press" struck the right note when it declared that India has earned her place at the Imperial Council, not only by her services in the war, but by "her conduct through the long years of peace." And though the "Ottawa Free Press" referred only to India's representation on the Council, it is none the less true that her claim to self-government is even more strongly based principally on the same ground. What the war has done is to show the part played by India in it as a flash lighting up the years of loyal service and peaceful development. What is wanted, if self-government is the ideal of British rule in India, is that there should be a substantial contribution made to it now. Everything depends on the spirit shown by those who are responsible for the administration of the country as well as by the permanent officials. The most recent official action,—the Indian Civil Service Bill,—unfortunately may not encourage the hope that the expected response of which many have recently spoken and written is likely to come forth. It shows that reactionary influences are still successfully at work, whose object is to keep India still as "a trusty dependent" and not, to quote the words of Lord Hardinge,—"a true friend of the Empire." But to suppose that those influences will be allowed to prevail in the great questions that will arise after the war is unthinkable.

Notes of the Day.The New Recruiting Scheme.

The report of Lord Derby's speech at the Mansion House, contained in a telegram this morning, seems to imply that a new scheme of recruitment, not wholly voluntary and not wholly compulsory, but a compromise between the two, has been decided upon. Lord Derby says those eligible for enlistment will be divided into forty-six groups, and the men will be called up when required, the unmarried being taken first. That the scheme is not wholly compulsory, as some of the points explained by Lord Derby would imply, is evident from his use of the conditional in saying that, "if every eligible man came forward it would be many months before the older married men would be called up." Apparently a roll is to be prepared of those who are willing to enlist if the necessity arises, or the understanding that their services will only be called for in case of such necessity. That seems to us a very sensible plan. There must be many men holding back at the present time, because of the uncertainty as to the number that will be required in the future. The best way of dealing with such a situation, of course, is to find out who and how many are the men who are prepared to go if there is a real need for more recruits. What has been lacking hitherto has been some sort of scientific organisation which will let the country know exactly what are the needs of the Government and will, at the same time, let the Government know what are the resources of the country. We take it that Lord Derby's scheme is designed to supply that organisation.

A Fatuous Proposal.

Of all the fatuous and useless suggestions that have been made from time to time during the last few months by people who, for one reason or another, are dissatisfied with the Government, perhaps the most foolish is that of Lord St. Davids, which Reuter has taken the trouble to telegraph, that the King should summon the Privy Council to discuss the whole situation of the war. The Privy Council consists of a large number of peers, all the leading statesmen who occupy seats in Parliament,—and who can say all they want to say there,—and for the rest of a number of estimable gentlemen who have at one time or another been rewarded with a Privy Councillorship, prior or subsequent to being gracefully placed upon the political shelf. What good could possibly be the outcome of a debate by this heterogeneous collection of people with no sort of responsibility to the people it is difficult to imagine. There is already one Parliament responsible to the country which can do all the talking that is required and a great deal more. The Privy Council cannot do any better, but it can create a great deal of mischief by letting off a flood of criticism which it will have no power to translate into effective action. The Privy Council, now-a-days has merely a formal existence. As a political institution it is an anachronism which ceased to play any active part in the Constitution nearly two hundred years ago. And Lord St. Davids is "nothing to nobody!"

"A Useless Exotic."

The system of trial by jury is one of the priceless English institutions which have for centuries preserved the liberties of the English people. Though the jury system itself is new to India, the principle is much older than the system itself. For one of the most valuable powers of the ancient village Panchayets was to try all criminal as well as civil cases. One of the most needed reforms in the Judicial Administration of India is a wider extension in it of the system of trial by jury in order not only to bring it into line with that obtaining in advanced countries, but also to check the vagaries of the judges. It is, perhaps, not surprising that this reform should be resisted by many of the judges themselves and this is strikingly evidenced from the opinions expressed by some of the judges in Madras on the working of the jury system. The extreme view taken by two judges mentioned in the telegram throws light on the character of this opinion. Mr. Bose of North Arcot delivers himself of this entertaining dictum: "That the system is valueless when the jury pays attention to the judge's summing up and mischievous when it does not and that on the whole it is a useless exotic!" Some people may think a district judge a dangerous exotic!

Increase of Indigo Cultivation in India.

In view of the increasing demand for natural dye, owing to the stoppage of the imports of synthetic products of Germany, the forecast of the Indian indigo crop for 1915-16 is of special interest. The effect of the demand due to war is seen in the fact that the area now under indigo is put at 258,100 acres as against only 116,500 in 1914-15. And each of the provinces, which cultivates this crop, shows a larger area, with the exception of the Punjab, but it is in Madras that the progress is most marked as is evidenced from the fact that, while in the preceding year only 40,000 acres were sown with indigo, the area thus sown this year has more than trebled, and the output is put at 24,000 cwt. In the Punjab the want of rain and shortage of canal water in some districts interfered with sowing and hence there is a general decrease in the acreage. That the dye industry in India has received a new lease of life after a long period of depression is evident from the estimated outturn for 1915-16 which is put at 38,500 cwt. Prices continue to rule high and this factor may be expected to bring about a further extension in the cultivation of indigo.

The Bakri-Id.

The Bakri-Id festival has this year passed off quietly in all parts of the country. No undesirable disturbances, such as those which have marred its observance in preceding years, fortunately, took place. And a specially gratifying and encouraging piece of news comes from Farukhabad, where there were serious disturbances on the occasion last year,—that on the eve of the Bakri-Id this year, both Hindus and Mahomedans held mass meetings at which resolutions were passed urging the promotion and maintenance of friendly relations between the two communities. At the conclusion of the meeting, it is stated, members of the two communities embraced each other and many Mahomedans subscribed to a cow protection society. All this is very hopeful and serves to illustrate the existence of the growing spirit of national unity which prompts both communities to meet each other half-way and to sink small differences in view of the infinitely stronger link which unites them.

Havoc by Wild Animals.

The havoc played by wild animals and snakes in this country is not sufficiently realised. The extent of the destruction involved can be judged from the fact that in twenty-five years, ending in 1911, the number of human beings reported to have been killed in British India by wild animals was 67,389 and by snakes 543,994. According to the Government of India Resolution, issued recently, it appears that during the year 1914, 1,745 persons were killed by wild animals and 22,894 by snakes. The largest death-roll was returned by Bihar and Orissa, which was responsible for nearly one-third of the total toll exacted by wild animals and for 5,908 deaths by snakes. The figures for other provinces in respect of death by wild animals generally show, increase, while, as regards those by snake-bite, Bengal with 4,356 suffered most heavily. Decreases are noticed in Madras and Assam, but the mortality of 1,169 in the Punjab is the highest for that province recorded in recent years,—the chhis vipers being the greatest source of danger.

The Deadly Tiger.

The tiger is the animal which plays the greatest havoc with human life and the largest number of deaths was, as usual, caused by them,—being 646 lives as compared with 641 in 1913. Increases under this head occurred in Behar and Orissa, the Central Provinces and Berar and Assam, the first-named province with 239 deaths against 251 in 1913, showing the highest figure. All other provinces, except Bombay, which reports 3 deaths as in the preceding year, shows a decline. Of other animals, leopards were responsible for 281 deaths against 236 in 1913. There was a slight decrease in the number of human beings killed by bears, wolves and elephants, the figures under these heads being 95, 137, 57 against 105, 152 and 62 respectively, in 1913. The number of cattle reported to have been killed by wild animals totals 94,746; leopards, as usual, were responsible for the largest number of deaths, claiming over 50 per cent. of the total mortality, tigers, accounting for 30,418, deaths, come next, followed by wolves accounting for 10,115. During the year 25,903 wild animals including 1,481 tigers, 6,557 leopards, 3,076 bears and 2,960 wolves were destroyed and the number of snakes destroyed was 1,18,316. The total amount paid in rewards for the destruction of wild animals and snakes was about two lakhs of rupees. All the statistics are obviously imperfect, but they are enough to show the extent of the harm being done every year.

Official and Personal

Mr. Harrison, officiating Director-General of Post and Telegraphs, left Simla on tour and will visit Karachi. His subsequent movements are yet unsettled.

The King has approved of the appointment of the Hon. Mr. T. V. Seshagiri Iyer to succeed to the vacancy of Puisne Judge in the Madras High Court, which will arise when Sir C. Sankaran Nair takes his seat on the Viceroy's Council.

BULGARIA'S ENTRY INTO MACEDONIA

The Russians have brought off a dashing coup-de-main against the Austro-German centre. They captured an important railway junction south-east of Baranovitch between Brest-Litovsk and Minsk and took in the course of the day 85 officers, 3,552 men, one gun and ten machine-guns.

A telegram from Verona says that the general advance of Italians along the Tyrol frontier is being executed in accordance with General Cadorna's plan to assist Serbia by threatening the enemy and invading the latter's territory. The results achieved are satisfactory.

The capture of Pragasina and Brentonico threatens Riva and Rovereto respectively and the capture of Brentonico also means command of the road to Mori and railway to Trent.

Bulgaria semi-officially claims to have entered the Macedonian towns of Ishtip and Radoviste. This shows that the main Bulgarian thrust is towards Greece and against the advance of the Allies.

The Serbians are confident of holding out till the arrival of the Allies.

The Germans have suffered another grievous defeat eastward of Rheims. After a violent preparatory bombardment and ever-increasing clouds of poison gas on a front of nine kilometres, they thrice attempted to penetrate French positions, but were decimated by machine-gun and artillery fire and finally stopped before the French entanglements. The enemy suffered a repulse also in Givenchy Wood.

The Rumanian Government has despatched a mission to Petrograd, to which considerable importance is attached.

Nothing noteworthy has occurred in the Dardanelles. The Turks exploded a mine at Hill 60, but it was beneath their own lines. Much damage was done to their own trenches.

The alterations which it was proposed to make in the existing regulations related to the age limit and would enable the candidates, who had rendered military service, to compete at a slightly higher age.

EXECUTION OF MISS
CAVELLREPORT FROM LEGATION AT BRUSSELS.

HOW FACTS WERE CONCEALED.

STORM OF WRATH IN BRITISH PRESS.

(REUTER'S SPECIAL WAR SERVICE)

LONDON, Oct. 21.

The Press Bureau publishes a communication from the American Ambassador enclosing the report from the Legation at Brussels on the case of Miss Cavell, showing that the German authorities failed to carry out their promise to report all the developments of the case to the Legation, and did their utmost to conceal the fact of the passing of the sentence and its immediate execution from the Legation, which, on unofficially learning the facts, did its utmost to obtain a postponement. The Minister, though ill, wrote personally imploring mercy for a woman who had devoted her life to alleviating suffering and had nursed German soldiers since the beginning of the war.

The Spanish Minister forcibly and orally supported the plea for clemency.

SENTENCED AT FIVE AND EXECUTED AT TWO IN THE MORNING.

The Legation reports that Miss Cavell was sentenced at five in the evening of October 11 and executed at two in the morning of the 12th.

"DIED FOR HER COUNTRY."

The English clergyman who administered Holy Communion in her cell at ten in the evening found her admirably calm and strong. She told him she knew perfectly well what she had done in confessing to her acts and thus providing the court-martial with practically all its evidence. She said she was happy; she died for her country.

NO QUESTION OF ESPIONAGE.

It transpires that there was no question of espionage. She merely assisted the British and Belgian soldiers to escape. She informed, the Court that she had helped them because she believed that otherwise they would be shot.

SIR EDWARD 6 REPLY TO AMERICAN DISPATCHES.

Sir E. Grey, in acknowledging the American dispatches, says he is confident that the news of the execution of this noble Englishwoman will be received with horror and disgust throughout the civilised world. The attitude of German authorities is, if possible, rendered worse by the discreditable and successful efforts of the German civil officials to conceal the facts, thus proving that the German authorities concerned were well aware that the execution of the sentence was unwarranted by any consideration.

THEME OF RECRUITING SPEAKERS

Not even the sinking of the Lusitania shocked the British nation as have the official details of Miss Cavell's execution which fill pages in the papers.

The matter was the theme of the recruiting speakers in Trafalgar Square where, beneath the lavishly decorated Nelson Column, an officer asked hundreds of thousands who had come to do homage to England's hero: Who will avenge the murder of this splendid Englishwoman?

BISHOP OF LONDON'S SERMON

The Bishop of London in the Trafalgar Day sermon at St. Martin's said: The iniquities of the Germans in Belgium and the Lusitania crime will ring throughout history, but t'e oldblooded murder of the English girl for harbouring refugees will run them hard in the world's opinion. There is now no need for compulsion; three million Englishmen, Scotsmen and Irishmen will know the reason why she was murdered.

INDIGNANT PRESS COMMENTS

The following extracts faintly indicate the storm of wrath voiced by the press at what one paper calls "The most damnable crime of the war."

The "Daily Telegraph" says: Our enemy has incurred the disgust and loathing of all honourable and merciful men in Europe and America and must pay the bitter reckoning to the uttermost farthing. "The Times" writes: The Germans have killed this English nurse as Napoleon killed Dug d'Enghien. They could have done no greater service to the British cause.

The "Morning Post" asserts that no case hitherto has so shown up the ghastly descent of German character into primitive brutality. Miss Cavell is a modern Antigone. The "Daily Express" says: The modern Herod has seen the writing on the wall. The "Daily Mail" says: The horror of

SERBIA'S CONFIDENCE.

BULGARIA'S INVASION OF MACEDONIA.MAIN THRUST TO STEM ALLIES' ADVANCE.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.)

ATHENS, Oct. 21.

Bulgaria semi-officially claims to have entered the Macedonian towns of Ishtip and Radoviste. This is very interesting as showing that the main Bulgarian thrust is towards North Greece and against the advance of the Allies.

Probably the Bulgarians are aiming more at occupying Macedonia than joining up with the Austrians and the Germans.

SERBIA'S CONFIDENCE.

The Serbians express confidence that they can resist till the arrival of the Allies.

GREECE AND THE ALLIES.

WILL SHE JOIN?

ALLAHABAD, Oct. 22.

The "Pioneer's" London correspondent cables, London, 21st October:—

The "Journal's" Salonika correspondent says, "The Franco-British camps are most active. Even we Greeks are undergoing a period of intense preparation. Before acting with our Allies we shall await the time when our forces will be sufficient to ensure success."

The "Metin's" Athens correspondent notes a marked change in public opinion since the taking of Strumitza. Should circumstances compel the Government to join the Allies, the nation will unanimously follow.

The "Hestia" states that the Allied ministers amicably made M. Zaimis understand that Greece must decide speedily whether she is with or against the Allies.

Bucharest reports state that trenches and entanglements are being constructed around Sofia.

The "Petit Journal's" Turin correspondent says that the Serbian minister has officially protested against the German excesses at Belgrade where the males have been exterminated and the women subjected to frightful violence.

CAMPAIGN IN SERBIA.

"THE TIMES" COMMENT.

LONDON, Oct. 21.

Discussing the campaign in Serbia, "The Times" observes that she is being invaded from half a dozen points and her position is therefore serious, but the country is chiefly a chaos of mountains, admirably adapted to guerrilla warfare. The Serbs have two practicable roads leading to the Adriatic and it might be possible to send them almost all the supplies by them. Spain wrought the ruin of Napoleon. May not Serbia prove the undoing of the Kaiser?

ROUMANIA'S MISSION TO PETROGRAD

LONDON, Oct. 21.

The Rumanian Government has despatched a mission to Petrograd. Considerable importance is attached to it.

PRIVY COUNCIL AND THE WAR SITUATION.

SUGGESTION BY LORD ST. DAVID'S.

LONDON, Oct. 21.

Lord St. David's will suggest, in the House of Lords on the 27th instant, that the Government shall advise the King to call a full meeting of the Privy Council to discuss the whole situation as regards the war.

CONCESSIONS FOR INVALIDED OFFICERS

MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S REPLY.

LONDON, Oct. 21.

In reply to Colonel Yate who pleaded for more generous treatment of the officers of the Indian Army invalided home from the front, Mr. Chamberlain said: I see no reason for additional concessions.

This wicked and purposeless deed has stunned the world. There is a cry to the Heaven for vengeance.

The "Daily News" says: It is a blow to the hateful tyranny, more tremendous than military defeat.

The "Daily Chronicle" considers the crime one of the most eloquent proofs yet given to the world of the meaning of German bloodlust and duplicity.

The "Daily Graphic" says: Let "Cavell" be the battery. Let Cavell battalions be raised, pledged to avenge her.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 22.

The "Nieuw van den Dagh" expresses the hope that humanity everywhere will protest against the Cavell crime.

HER COURAGE IN LAST MOMENTS

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 22.

A Belgian nurse, a friend of Miss Cavell, says that when the latter was asked if she wished to add anything in her defence or to sign any request for the Kaiser's pardon, she merely shrugged her shoulders and walked out. She refused to have her eyes bandaged and before the shooting party she pinned to her bodice a small Union Jack.

INDIAN ARCHAEOLOGY.

REPORT ON EXPLORATIONS AND DISCOVERIES.

GOVERNMENT'S APPRECIATIVE RESOLUTION.

(News Bureau.)

SIMLA, Oct. 22.

The Government of India have issued an important Resolution on Archaeology. This is accompanied by a long Note of 14 closely printed pages contributed by Sir John Marshall, Director-General. He begins by taking a retrospect of the department which was instituted more than half a century ago, but the first forty years of its existence were singularly chequered. The wide and far-reaching reforms carried out by Lord Curzon's Government have since been developed and matured in various directions with signal profit to the Archaeological enterprise throughout the country. Sir John claims that experience has demonstrated that imperial assistance and supervision are indispensable to the efficient working of the department.

TWO-FOLD FUNCTIONS OF THE DEPARTMENT.

After dwelling upon the present organization, the Director-General points out that the functions of the Archaeological Department are in the main two, namely, conservation and investigation. In the view of the Government both these functions have an equal claim to its patronage and it will be seen that during recent years increasing attention has been paid to exploration and research of every kind but for the present, owing to its persistent neglect in years gone by, conservation is and must for long remain the paramount duty of the department.

After describing the monuments conserved from 1910-15 during which the number rose from 150 to 700 of ancient buildings or groups of buildings in British India. Among these buildings every class of architecture and every type of structure is represented, for whatever purpose religious or secular, it may have been erected and to whatever race or creed it may belong, the only criterion applied being whether its architectural merit or its historic associations entitled it to a place among the national monuments of the country.

FUTURE OF CONSERVATION WORK. As to the future of conservation work in India there are still, in spite of all that has been achieved in recent years, numbers of priceless monuments waiting to be rescued from the ravages of the jungle and decay. Many more years must elapse before all these can be overhauled and their repair taken in hand and when this has been done there will still remain the further task of maintaining them from year to year, a task which will demand unremitting care and watchfulness on the part of the Archaeological Department. The Government attach much importance to the organisation and development of museums as centres of research and education.

RECENT EXPLORATIONS.

Sir John then dwelt upon the recent exploration work undertaken since the re-organisation in 1912 and much solid work done at Charsanda, Rajegir, Sabethal, Kasia, Sarnath and other spots. Then followed the exploration of the town of Bhita near Allahabad where for the first time well-preserved remains of houses, shops and streets dating as far back as the (Mauryan) period were laid bare, which help us materially to visualise the every day life of the townpeople in those early days. At Taxila the results obtained have been epoch-making. The results of excavations at Patliputra, Sanchi, Takhti and Sahri Bhilol are too well known to need recapitulation. They produced a number of funeral urns inscribed with legends in the extinct Pali and the ancient Telegu scripts offered fresh evidence of the influence exerted by Southern India on the culture of Lower Burma, while the archaic character of the alphabet suggests that Indian civilisation reached Prome as early as the 2nd or 3rd century A.D.

SIR AUREL STEIN'S DISCOVERIES. Sir John Marshall then details Sir Aurel Stein's three prolonged journeys in Chinese Turkestan and the adjoining borderlands of China, who discovered in the deserts immense hoards of ancient relics belonging to a civilisation which owed its chief inspiration to India. Of the antiquities secured by Sir Aurel Stein in the course of this prolonged and arduous journey, no less than 182 cases weighing over 21,000 lbs., have already been despatched to India.

As regards epigraphy, Avantipur has yielded unique and precious examples of local plastic art of medieval epoch and Hawsa in Burma has more than 3,700 inscriptions which have been copied in the past five years and have greatly added to our knowledge of Past India.

EPIGRAPH AND GENEALOGIES.

In the south of the Peninsula, for example, the history of all the leading dynasties has been advanced and the chronology of the various princely lines established on a firm basis and in more details. This has been made possible through the important synchronism of reigning kings attested by epigraphs, by notices of princely names unknown before and in some cases by fairly lengthy genealogies. Nor is it only in regard to reigning houses that documents of this class supply important evidence. Thus

A pretty wedding took place at the Bombay Baptist Church at Colaba on Wednesday when Mr. S. G. Aymer of the Government Press, Delhi, was married to Miss Jessie Binks, daughter of Mr. H. T. Binks, of Bombay. Afterwards the party proceeded to the Taj Mahal Hotel, where Mr. C. Stangles, the popular Manager, had provided a very recherche wedding breakfast. After breakfast a group photograph of the wedding party was taken. Among those present were—Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Aymer, Miss Rose MacIntyre, Miss L. Halse, Mr. and Mrs. MacIntyre, Mr. W. Biggs, Mr. and Mrs. Newby, Mr. and Mrs.

Adams, Mr. R. Gravestone, Mrs. Cramer, Mrs. Baisley, Mr. S. MacDonald, Miss Barodawala, Mr. Barodawala, A. Francet, Mr. and Mrs. Davidson, Mr. X. Burekle, Mr. J. MacDonald, Mrs. S. Sinclair, Mr. and Mrs. Simpkins, Mr. and Mrs. Menesse, Miss Menesse, Mr. J. Hvykoop, Mr. G. MacDonald,

MYSORE REPRESENTATIVE ASSEMBLY.

(News Bureau.)

MYSORE, Oct. 22.

At to-day's meeting of the representative assembly a number of subjects of local importance came up for discussion. A few supplementary questions will be submitted by the members at to-morrow's meeting.

MYSORE REPRESENTATIVE ASSEMBLY.

VILLAGE IMPROVEMENT BY COMPULSORY LABOUR.

(News Bureau.)

MYSORE, Oct. 22.

The third sitting of the Mysore Representative Assembly commenced at 12 o'clock yesterday in the Darbar Hall. Dewan Sir Visvesvaraya presided. On the right he was supported by Sir Leslie Miller, Chief Judge, and on the left by Councillors Nandundaya and Sardar Kantaraj Urs. Many departmental heads were also seated on the platform.

The Dewan commenced the proceedings by referring to the subject of village improvement by compulsory labour and inviting individual opinion regarding the desirability or otherwise of introducing compulsory labour and also regarding the imposing of fines on defaulters. There was a long and interesting discussion. When the Dewan invited the Rev. Mr. Gulliford as to what he thought of the matter, that gentleman said the time was ripe for undertaking legislative measures at present. After some more discussion the matter was eventually dropped.

Another subject of debate related to the appointment of a commission to enquire into relationship of inamdar and tenants. Here too discussion was long and interesting, in course of which Mr. Venkatramaya of Bangalore pointed out that for the past forty-three years "patta" was not granted to a certain inamdar. The suggestion was opposed by others on the ground that interference with the existing relations of the inamdar and tenant was undesirable and unwarrantable. The matter was finally noted for further enquiry.

After lunch the Assembly was engaged in discussing minor local questions which occupied its time till after five, when the assembly rose for the day.

ANOTHER DASTARDLY OUTRAGE

C.I.D. INSPECTOR SHOT DEAD.

Babu Girindranath Banerjee, Inspector of the C.I.D., was shot dead on Thursday at 10-30 p.m. and Babu Upendranath Chatterjee, Sub-Inspector, was seriously wounded at 99, Musjeed Bari Street. It appears that an entertainment was arranged to bid farewell to a C.I.D. officer under orders of transfer. The two victims with five other officers of the service attended.

FULLY ARMED OFFICERS SHOT.

LATER.

A dastardly outrage was committed last night in the residence of the Inspector of the Intelligence Branch of the Bengal C.I.D. in Musjeed Bari Street near the Burtala Thana. Four officers of the Bengal C.I.D., including Sub-Inspector Girindranath Banerjee and Upendranath Chatterjee were assembled in a room on the ground-floor of the house. Suddenly a Bengali youth appeared at the open door of the room and fired several shots from a revolver hitting and killing Girindra Babu on the spot and wounding Upendra Babu on the back and arm. The two officers were armed with fully loaded revolvers but the attack was so sudden that they had no time to draw their weapons. The body of Girindra Babu was removed to the morgue and Upendra Babu was removed in a motor car to the Medical College Hospital where he is progressing. The other police officers in the room managed to escape unhurt into another room of the house. The scene of occurrence was visited shortly afterwards by Mr. Clarke, Officiating Commissioner of Police, Messrs. Lowman and Bromage, Deputy Commissioners and Rai Saheb Purna Chandra Lahiri, Superintendent of Police. No arrest is so far reported.

OTHER OFFICERS CHASED.

The incident took place when, during the entertainment to the outgoing officer, merry-making was in full swing. Some strangers rushed into the room with revolvers in hand and one of them shot Girindra who reeled back and fell, dying almost immediately. The other inmates ran upstairs where they were chased by the strangers on the first floor. Sub-Inspector Upendra Nath Chatterji was also shot. The assassins made good their escape. Girindra joined the C. I. D. only two years ago. The dead body of Girindra will be taken to the burning ghats this afternoon for cremation. Some searches were made last night.

THREE ARRESTS REPORTED

The premises No. 99, Musjeed Bari Street, the scene of the outrage, was occupied by Sub-Inspector Jibankrishna Banerjee of the C.I.D. After the first shot was fired there was a scramble for the door leading to the inner apartments. The officers turned their back and made for the staircase leading to the zenana. The assassins emboldened by the situation followed the officers, tackling Girindra Babu who lagged behind. He was shot through the chest and the hip. The deceased Girindra Babu leaves behind him a widow and children. He was son-in-law of the late Rai Narsingh Chunder Mukerji Bahadur, a Vakil of the High Court and Sanskrit scholar of some fame. Three arrests are reported to have been made.

THE DECEASED INSPECTOR.

Further enquiries in connection with this morning's outrage show that the deceased Inspector was an inhabitant of Bongang in the district of Jessore. He joined the Police Force as Head Constable and after seven years of good service was promoted to the rank of Sub-Inspector.

The post-mortem examination took place this evening at 4 o'clock at Nimtollah Baring Ghat. All Deputy Commissioners, Inspectors and Sub-Inspectors of the Criminal Investigation Department and a large number of friends and relations were present.

A large number of wreaths and flowers were thrown on the pyre. The wounded Inspector Upendra is progressing satisfactorily, he has regained consciousness.

LATER

Of the three men arrested in connection with the murder of the Sub-Inspector one is a Bengali student, his name being Amarnath Ghose. Search was made in his house as well as the house of two others, but so far as is known nothing incriminating was found.

The instructions he had received in the first instance was to oppose the bail application strenuously. His Lordship adjourned the hearing of the application to Monday, to enable the Public Prosecutor to get instructions meanwhile.

SHELLS FROM THE SANDS OF BOMBAY.

SOME LEGAL LUMINARIES OF THE FIFTIES.

(BY SANDY SEVENTY.)

In some previous chapters of the "Shells" sufficient has been related about Sir Erskine Perry, who was a most distinguished Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Judicature in Bombay in the early part of the Fifties. Sufficient has also been recalled in respect of Sir Matthew Goss, who was Chief Justice from 1856 to 1866, and Sir Joseph Arnould, who sat on the bench as Puisne Judge from 1859 to 1869. When Sir Matthew retired, the post of Chief Justice naturally fell to his lot, but that judge declined to fill it for private reasons of his own. With rare effacement he allowed his junior, Sir Richard Couch, to be the head of the High Court. But two historical cases with which his name is intimately associated must be mentioned in passing in this place. It is not within the scope of the reminiscences to refer to the cases themselves and to their merits nor to the incidents which led to the litigation. The earlier case which occupied Sir Joseph Arnould's court for many a day was that known as the Maharaja Libel Case. It was a case of libel. A valiant and courageous social reformer belonging to the Kipole caste, Mr. Kurnondas Moolji, an Elphinstonian at boot, was the editor of an excellent Gujarathi weekly called the "Satya Prakash" dedicated to social reform among the Hindus, principally the reform about the remarriage of widows. Incidentally the editor in his reforming zeal had necessarily to describe the many questionable practices, which, under the guise of religion, were carried on by the high-priests of certain sects in Bombay—the Vallabhacharyas. He tomahawked those practices with the aid of his scathing pen. The practices were rampant and more or less belonged to a class of morals repugnant to the high class standard of Hindu ethics. The temples under the jurisdiction of those priests were on certain religious and festive days thronged by the women of the caste, ignorant and superstitious, to pay their obeisance first to the God and next to their high-priests. Undue liberties were said to be taken with some of the votaries, against which there were loud mutters among the caste men themselves as well as those outside the pale of caste. In fact, it is no exaggeration to say that they were deemed by the Indian society generally in the city as a public scandal. Mr. Kurnondas in a series of articles set about mercilessly exposing them. No doubt personalities were indulged in, which brought the courageous editor within the clutches of the law of libel. The high-priest or his nominee filed a suit in the High Court and Sir Joseph Arnould was the erudite Judge before whom it came to be heard. Mr. Michael Westropp, as the advocate on behalf of Mr. Kurnondas, greatly distinguished himself in that suit. It was the prominence which he attracted which afterwards brought him so much practice and led to his elevation to the Bench in 1863. Mr. Westropp's forensic lore and judicial ability came to the front. The knowledge he displayed of the Hindu law was evident—a knowledge which he extended and utilised to good purpose all through his judicial career on the bench. In fact, Westropp since those days has been recognised on this side of India as a great authority on Hindu law and cases recorded in the reports of the High Court testify to the fact. The scholarship and the historic perception of Sir Joseph Arnould were also seen at their fullest in this case. His judgment was remarkable. It may have its legal flaws. But as a specimen of the judge's great erudition, ripe scholarship, power of analysis and charm of lucid expression, apart from the scholarly style, greatly enhanced his reputation. But Sir Joseph had arrived in Bombay with a reputation as a great Oxford scholar and Fellow of Wadham College, besides being a literary contributor and a friend of the Brownings.

THE AGA KHAN CASE.

The other equally important case in which Sir Joseph further gained his judicial laurels was that known as the Aga Khan Case. It related to a civil suit regarding the hegemony of the old Aga, the grandfather of the present distinguished one of politics rather than of Islamism. Sir Joseph took no pains to go back into the history of the lineage of the Aga beginning with his dynasty of the chief of the assassins how he came to be a refugee in Bombay, owing to the disturbed Afghan and Persian politics, how he first became the spiritual head of the Khojas, how the sect of the Khojas itself came to be Mahomedan from their former Hinduism, apart from the Jamatkhana and proprietorship and other benefices—all these the learned Judge brought succinctly in his elaborate judgment, which has not lost its historical interest even to-day. Indeed it may be said that that erudite judgment will stand so long as our High Court lasts as a monument of Sir Joseph's great ability, scholarship and historic perception. In this case Mr. Bayley was the most prominent advocate. And speaking of Bayley, who was elevated to the bench in succession to Sir Joseph, it may be said that he could in no way come up to the judicial lore, equanimity and power of exposition as Michael Westropp. Justice Bayley, however, belonged to an influential English family, while his grandfather or some near relative was a distinguished Chief Justice of Australia and the author of a legal treatise. He was a legal star of the second magnitude. But in his own profession it was often observed that his natural vocation would have been that of a crack cavalry officer.

JAMES SEWELL WHITE.

His contemporary James Sewell White towered head and shoulder above him. It was a pleasure to hear White arguing a complicated case with all his nerve and verve and with a lucidity which was the envy of many a counsel of his day. A tall man with a fair countenance and an intellectual Roman forehead, it was a treat to watch him argue a good case, making point by point and pressing home his salient points with all the vigour of the lawyer with great legal confidence in himself. But, perhaps, Mr. White was seen at his best in the Legislative Council when, in his capacity as Advocate-General, it fell to his lot to argue rather on the democratic than the bureaucratic side during the passage of the Municipal Reform Bill known as the Act of 1872. Mr. Tucker was the senior member of the Executive Government, and in charge of the important measure. But he was over-cautious and too conservative and hardly able to reconcile himself with the advancing times and in harmony with popular sentiments and feelings on the question of municipal franchise. As Mr. White twitted him the people did not want his "homeopathic" doses of municipal reform. The doses should be generous and free from the cribbed, cabined and confined prejudices of the governing caste of the white Brahmins. It was recognised at the time that in Mr. White the reformers had found their David against the Goliath of the bureaucratic interests, which even to-day are so inimical to those who advocate local self-government on a popular basis. In short in Mr. White Mr. Tucker found a veritable Tartar, albeit the Advocate-General of the day. He himself was a convinced reformer and his sympathies were on the popular side. But for his strenuous advocacy the citizens would have had to be content with Mr. Tucker's atomic pieces of reform. Mr. White's independence, however, never got a chance on the bench of the Bombay High Court, which he might have adorned. But he had the satisfaction of shining on the superior bench of the High Court of Calcutta.

LEGAL STARS OF THE SIXTIES.

During the Sixties, subsequent to the aftermath of share speculation, litigation vastly increased in Bombay. Counsel of all sorts were greatly in requisition and clever ones soon rose to the top of the tree. Some really shook the pagoda trees and retired, though be it said that they never expected those large fees now in vogue. The fees now earned by counsel are in no way to be compared with the giants of the Sixties and Seventies. They those earned would have been deemed fabulous. But times have changed and mediocrity earns more to-day than an Anstey or a MacCulloch earned during the times referred to here. Among the stars who shone in the then legal constellation were Mr. (afterwards Sir) Andrew Scooble Messrs. Pigott (the elder) MacCulloch, Green, Latham and others. Mr. Scooble was known as a good common law counsel. He had a pleasing delivery and a prepossessing face. The present writer saw him once more as a member of the Welby Commission in 1897 and he was hale and hearty, besides flourishing exceedingly as a director, and subsequently as a chairman of the Board of the G. I. P. Railway Company. He afterwards rose to be a Judge of H. M. Praty Council. It may be recorded here that Mr. Scooble was the Sheriff of Bombay in 1866-67. Numerous attachments of the property of bankrupts, the victims of the mad speculation of 1863-64, had to be signed by the Sheriff, for which he received a "poundage." The Sheriffship during that year and for some years thereafter was lucrative and much coveted for. Mr. Scooble is reported to have pocketed something like Rs. 65,000 during his shrievalty—a sum which would make the mouth of a counsel in fair practice to-day water. But they were very moderate in those days. The sheriffship was a gift of the Government and off and on it was bestowed on great merchants, who had come to misfortune, but had remained esteemed, regarded and sympathised by the community. Two typical instances may be recorded of such. There was Mr. David Watson of the highly respectable firm of Messrs. Watson Bogle and Company of Tamarind Lane, of which the late Mr. Morarji Geculdas, C.I.E., was the broker. They were ruined by the fall in the price of Lancashire piece-goods sometime after the close of the American War. The other was Mr. Cursetji Furdonji, once reported to be a millionaire and a partner in the wealthy firm of Rustomji Janssji, Jeejeebhoy and Company, who also came to grief by reason of the heavy fall in the cotton prices after the same war. The last of the Sheriffs who earned a poundage of just Rs. 6,000 was Mr. Javerlal Umashanker Yajnik, somewhere in 1896 or so. Thereafter the shrievalty was shorn of the kernel and nowadays the shell alone is bestowed, for which even a variety of men of all conditions compete or hanker. It was Sir George Cotton of the firm of Messrs. Greaves Cotton and Company, who was the first unbenevolent Sheriff of Bombay. But what a contrast are the Sheriffs of 1860-70 and 1880 with those who came after them! Sic transit gloria.

The Perils of Pauline

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALLMENTS.

Sanford Marvin, a wealthy manufacturer of automobiles, has worn out his adopted daughter, Pauline, love of her life, but she wants two years of thrilling experiences, seeing life before marrying. Her reason is that she is ambitious to be a writer. Old Mr. Marvin asks to see what she has written. While Pauline and Harry are in search of a magazine containing her story, Mr. Marvin opens the case of a mummy which has just arrived from Egypt. Raymond Owen, his rascally private secretary, helps lift off the front of the case, but leaves the old man to remove the mummy's bandages alone. Mr. Marvin, during a fainting spell, sees the half-exposed mummy come to life, step out of her case, take a bracelet from her wrist and try to force it into his nerveless grasp while her lips whisper a strange message from the remote past.

Restored to consciousness by Harry and Pauline, the old man believes it to be a dream until later he finds the identical bracelet on the mummy's skeleton wrist. He promises Pauline one year to see life, and places her in the guardianship of Owen. A final heart attack gives him just time to write on the doctor's prescription blank a brief will. Then he dies. A lawyer tells Owen that he would have permanent charge of Pauline's estate if something should happen to her before marriage. Owen conspires with villainous characters to have Pauline killed. Balthazar, the Gypsy chief, allies himself with Owen. The preceding chapters have dealt with the many efforts of the two to accomplish Pauline's end.

Ferrari had appointed the duelling ground with courteous consideration. Watkins' Grove lay but six miles out of Westbury—between the town and the Marvin estate. It was, in its hey-day, a picnic place, and the music of the carousels, the shouts of the show-vender, the tumult of cheap merriment sounded there. But the merriment had gone too far; the folk of Westbury had made protest against Watkins' Grove. It perished in a night.

Its desolation was now its value for the purposes of Ferrari. It was not more than an hour after he had received the message from Harry Marvin accepting his challenge that he was there, choosing the battle-spot under the beneficent guidance of Raymond Owen, the Gypsy Balthazar and three of the latter's aides.

"Mark you," said Owen, sitting in the shadow of one of the abandoned buildings, "this must be brief. We don't want any of your splendid sword-play, Ferrari. We want action—quick. We want the man killed—you understand."

"Three thrusts—if you allow three thrusts and a parry, the work will be done."

"I hope so; but you know that he is no fool with a rapier, don't you? You're not going against an amateur; remember that."

"To me they are all amateurs," said Ferrari, haughtily.

The sound of an automobile on the road silenced them.

Owen and Balthazar peered through the hedge of bushes that circled the deserted building. They saw Harry Marvin bring his runabout to a stop, spring out and help Pauline to alight.

"Ha!" exclaimed Owen.

"What is it, Master?" whispered Balthazar.

"He is as much of a fool as I thought. He has actually brought the girl to act as his second. He does anything—everything—she demands. We have them both in our power."

Pauline was clad, as was Harry, in a long automobile cloak, but her graces of face and figure were undisguised. Owen turned with a smile of triumph to Ferrari.

"Remember, it is to be done with speed. Now go," he said.

Balthazar produced a case of rapiers and handed it to one of the men who accompanied them.

"If I need you I will blow the whistle," said Ferrari, "but I shall not need you."

"Let me see the weapons," commanded Owen. "You are sure of the one that is—that is—"

"The one that is poisoned is the one with the thread on its hilt," said Balthazar, drawing two swords part way out of the case. "Giacomo here will see that the enemy takes the clean sword."

The man he mentioned, who had been appointed to act as Ferrari's second, bowed with black assent. He followed Ferrari briskly as the latter moved out towards Pauline and Harry.

"I bid you good health in the hour of your death," said the bandit.

"We won't talk about it. I came down here to fight," said Harry briefly.

Pauline stood proudly at his side as Ferrari's second presented the hilts of the rapiers across his bent arm.

One hilt extended beyond the others. Harry, without suspicion, chose it. He turned, testing the blade with the point upon his shoe.

Pauline approached Ferrari, who had drawn the rapier with the thread upon it. "I wish to see that the swords are of equal length," she declared. "That is the duty of a second."

Harry exploded with laughter. She flung him a withering look and took the rapier from his hand. She matched it carefully with Ferrari's, without seeing the thread nor suspecting its fearful significance.

"You may proceed," said Pauline gravely.

"You will get me killed if you don't stop making me laugh," declared Harry.

She handed him his sword, while Ferrari stood quaking. He looked carefully for the thread before he recovered his courage.

They saluted. The blades touched. Ferrari had pledged himself to end the affair quickly. He attacked furiously. Harry gave ground.

Pauline, standing apart, with Harry's cloak upon her arm, suddenly realized upon what a desperate mission she had launched the life of the man she loved. There swept through her mind the belated remorse that only women know. Women demand that men be brave and then reproach themselves for demanding it. Women can endure everything but consequences.

Still Pauline stood stoutly her ground. No tremor shook her; no fear drew forth a cry. And Harry retreated.

Suddenly the battle turned. Owen, peering through the bushes a hundred yards away, drew a hot breath.

"By Heaven, that boy can fight!" he said in alarm. Harry was backing Ferrari away now.

A rapier shot into the air above the heads of the fighters. Harry lowered his sword, its point to the ground, and stepped back, smiling.

Ferrari uttered a curse and leaped forward to catch up his weapon as it fell between them. But Harry put his foot on it.

"Harry, why do they want to kill us?"

"The sword was poisoned. Could I—"

"You were disarmed after you had said you were the most expert fencer in the world."

"You call me a coward. I will prove that I am not. Command me. I will give my life to prove that I am not a coward."

"That sounds better," said Owen coldly. "That is what we came to see if you would do."

"I am at your service. In what manner shall I aid you?" asked Ferrari.

"You were once, if I remember, capable of handling an automobile."

"I am still."

"And you are willing to risk your life to show that you are not a coward?"

Ferrari paused an instant, but the sneering smiles in the faces of Owen and Balthazar quickly readjusted his mental gear.

"I am," he said.

"Have you nerve enough to handle a racing car in the International to-morrow?"

"Yes."

"Good," said Owen. "And drive it according to the regulations."

"The secretary said his hat on the grimy

This is from the Motion Picture of "Pauline" by the Famous Pathe Players.
Harry, With Pauline as His Second, Threatens Ferrari, the Duellist, With the Poisoned Sword.

He threw his own sword to the ground. "Perhaps that is the better weapon," he said with mock courtesy. "Try my sword and I will use yours."

Ferrari trembled as he stooped to pick up Harry's rapier—as he realized that Harry held the weapon which was tipped with poison. The terror of his own knowledge was enough to defeat him now.

Harry took the offensive instantly. The clash of the steel blades was the only sound in the gloom of the grove. Pauline stood breathless, fascinated. Owen, Balthazar and the others of the hidden group lay still in dumb surprise.

Suddenly Ferrari dropped his rapier and turned his back to his adversary. He fled. He drew the whistle from his belt and blew it furiously.

"Go," gasped Owen behind the cover. Balthazar's two aides rushed out. As they came towards Harry they drew disks from their blouses.

For an instant Harry stood dumfounded. His first thought was for Pauline. He turned, but found her close at his side. She had stopped and snatched up Ferrari's sword.

Ferrari's second joined the other two gypsies and they rushed on.

Harry thrust out his left arm and placed it around Pauline. "Back," he said. They retreated slowly to the shelter of a giant tree.

The assailants came on. Harry charged. The blade of his sword gleamed white in the sunlight, dripped red on the ground as he encountered, with all the surviving strength of his body, all the protecting courage of his love, the enemies who sought to seize Pauline.

Despite his cries of warning, his pleadings amid the clashing of the blades, she came forward, armed with the sword of Ferrari.

One bandit fell under Harry's thrust; another engaged him. The third was approaching. Pauline rushed on. Another instant and her death would have been certain. But from the covert behind the ruined building came a cry:

"Run, run! The sword is poisoned!"

Harry's assailants stopped, bewildered, terrified. The voice was the voice of Ferrari.

A giant gypsy had just struck the rapier from Pauline's unpractised hand. His knife was over her. Harry drove at him. With a cry that was echoed in the voices of his companions, the man dropped the knife and fled. The others were before him. Harry and Pauline stood alone.

Harry lifted the blade of the rapier to his nostrils. "It is true," he said. But he carried it with him, unsheathed, as he led Pauline towards the runabout.

"Harry, why do they want to kill us?"

"That'll be enough," Owen crushed him. "You have taken our money and failed to do what you promised you WOULD do."

"The sword was poisoned. Could I—"

"You were disarmed after you had said you were the most expert fencer in the world."

"You call me a coward. I will prove that I am not. Command me. I will give my life to prove that I am not a coward."

"Have you nerve enough to handle a racing car in the International to-morrow?"

"Yes."

"Good," said Owen. "And drive it according to the regulations."

"The secretary said his hat on the grimy

What have we done?" she breathed as he drove away.

"We have too much money—and you have a guardian," he answered.

"Well, you needn't go into the automobile race. I'm not going to let you. Everything is dangerous. I don't mind for myself, but—"

He laughed. "I have entered now, you know," he said. "You are right that everything we do is dangerous, and if you give up the idea of riding with me, it will be the wisest thing you ever did."

"No," she whispered.

He stepped his sentence as he swung the machine through the gates to Castle Marvin.

"I don't understand how you can wish to risk your life."

"I am not afraid, Harry."

"But you say that you love me."

"Of course I do. You are the dearest."

"Of course I am, but if you love me, why do you want to risk the most precious thing to me in all the world?"

"I have to be there to see that—that nothing happens to you," she said. "Besides, you promised that I could."

"I did. That's settled," he said curtly.

"I don't know whether I shall marry you or not," she announced at the library door.

"Don't think you can," he replied. "They say marriages are made in Heaven; that's when we're going to be married, if we ever ARE married."

His wrath was smothered in an obliterating embrace. Her arms were around his neck. Her tender cheek was against his lips.

"Oh, you are wonderful, splendid—you could have killed him, and you didn't do it. You are the grandest—"

Then had to be a moment of surrender. But while he still held her in his arms he said: "Then you'll let me run your machine alone?"

"Certainly not."

"Why?"

"Just because you can fight with a sword doesn't mean that you can race a high-powered automobile. I must be there to—give suggestions."

She was away up the stairs before he could reply.

Owen and Balthazar called at the home of Ferrari, the master of swords.

"Well, you confounded sword, have you got anything to say for yourself?" demanded the Secretary.

"Is there anything he could say? Did we not see him at the height of his glory?" sneered Balthazar.

"Do you mean to insult me? Do you mean—"

"That'll be enough," Owen crushed him. "You have taken our money and failed to do what you promised you WOULD do."

"The sword was poisoned. Could I—"

"You were disarmed after you had said you were the most expert fencer in the world."

"You call me a coward. I will prove that I am not. Command me. I will give my life to prove that I am not a coward."

"Yes."

"Good," said Owen. "And drive it according to the regulations."

"The secretary said his hat on the grimy

table and drew his chair close to that of Ferrari. Balthazar followed his example. They talked in whispers.

"Remember—the curve at the Edgewood road crossing," said Owen as they parted half an hour later. "Balthazar here will see that their machine is crippled. All you have to do is to drive them into the ditch."

"Who's to be my mechanic?"

"We've hired one—a cheap one. It will cost nothing to kill him."

He moved to his small cupboard and took down a bottle of whiskey.

Ferrari winced as his guests departed.

Owen and Balthazar pushed their way across the lawn of the Elmsmere track.

"And they're gathering down there," whispered Balthazar significantly, "down by the Edgewood curve—OUR curve."

"So they are."

"Can't we reach Ferrari and change the plan?"

"No. Are you afraid? The machine will be waiting for you a hundred yards away. You will have to go through with it now."

"I will, Master."

The machines were moving out to the starting line. Owen, sheltered by the crowd, cries of those who stood above the dead man.

"Harry, you are showing; don't, don't! We MUST win now."

Pauline was clutching his arm as he straightened the big car out after the accident.

"I am perfectly willing to kill myself," he shouted back, "but you are worth something."

"Drive, drive!" she begged.

"On two tires?"

"On anything."

He calmly turned down the speed and put on the brakes.

Another volley of explosions echoed behind them. The work of Balthazar had been thorough.

"Harry! We must win after we have led them all the way. Harry."

"We have won," he said. "You don't see anybody passing us, do you? And here's the line."

"Oh, don't give him the credit," demanded Pauline of the friends who rushed up to the victorious car. "Harry was utterly stupid. He wouldn't drive faster than a snail. The only interesting remark he made was that we were going to be killed—and we weren't."

HOUSEWIVES!

Has it ever occurred to you that

I. C. O.
Cottonseed Oil

is not only as good as, but better than. BUTTER, GHEE or OLIVE OIL, and yet two-thirds as cheap? It is pure, wholesome, delicious, nutritious, and highly digestible. Dishes prepared with it appeal even to the most exacting epicure. You can always depend upon uniform quality at a uniform price—no worrying or quarrelling with your Mistry about the bill or the stuff! Always fresh and appetising, nothing to get rancid.

I. C. O. COTTONSEED OIL was first offered to the Indian public in 1911 and has since been in extensive use all over the country, in families, hotels, restaurants, clubs and messes. Doctors recommend it, food experts like it. The demand is great, it keeps our factories running day and night throughout the whole year. This is proof enough of its popularity.

During the last few years, Michelin has, by successive stages, lowered the prices of his tyres by nearly 50 per cent.

There is nothing abnormal about these reductions; they result partly from the present price of rubber, but more especially from the increased production of the three enormous Michelin factories.

Increased production means decreased manufacturing costs, and Michelin hands on a great part of this profit to motorists in the shape of cheaper prices.

An important point to remember is that, while the prices of Michelin Tyres have decreased, their quality has improved. In using MANAGER.

WOMEN WITH THE BELL PUNCH.

1,700 EMPLOYED AS TRAM CONDUCTORS

The woman tramway conductor has been a great success and when a speaker at the conference of the Municipal Tramways Association, at the Surveyors' Institute during mail week, said it was not intended to use them as motor-men there were cries of "Why not?"

At present there are 1,700 women engaged on tramcars, and the number is likely to be increased. Glasgow employs 818, and had 12,000 applications for situations. In the winter it is feared the skirt will be an inconvenience in running up and down stairs, and Glasgow proposes to provide the women with gaiters.

Glasgow has a school, with a ticket-inspector as teacher. Every pupil, Mr. J.
Dalrymple (the general manager) said, had to go through the order of inquiring the destination, issuing and punching the tickets and calling out the stations. The remainder of women sat round on forms as passengers.

Mr. Dalrymple had only one complaint. It was extremely difficult, he said, to make women realise the importance of time. They seemed to think that a few minutes late in signing on or in taking up a relief was not of much consequence.

Another delegate's explanation of why they were occasionally late was that "they had something to say to the other women, and that they would stop to say it." Women inspectors were appointed to deal with this difficulty.

Mr. A. L. C. Fell, manager of the I.C.C. tramways, said although they had been refused permission to employ women conductors in London the Commissioner of Police had helped them in many ways.
During the past year they had been allowed to overload the cars to practically an unlimited extent, and they had thus been able to release an enormous number of men. A resolution requesting the Executive Council to approach the Home Secretary to urge the removal of the restrictions on the employment of women conductors in London was carried.

In his presidential address Alderman H.
Linsley (chairman of the Salford Corporation Tramways Committee) said as much as £256,000,000 was sunk in municipal tramway enterprise, and 55,000 employees were connected with the undertakings. Over 16,000 or 30 per cent. of the employees had joined the services, and the cost incurred in continuing to pay them wages amounted to £380,000 a year.

FLIRTING OR ACTING?

"HOW FAR CAN A WOMAN GO?"

Two figures in a stage melodrama were the chief characters in a real life drama at West Ham Police Court on September 23.
Wilfred Edwin Brandon, an actor, was summoned for assaulting his wife, Betty. Mrs.
Brandon said she and her husband were playing at the Theatre Royal, Stratford, in the melodrama, "How Far Can a Woman Go?" There was a matinee, and when she came off the stage after a flirting scene her husband abused her, saying that she had not been "acting," but had actually been flirting. At night time he went to her dressing-room and punched her in the back. They were married last February.

In cross-examination she denied she had ever said she had been married in Russia.

The Defendant: To Maurice Van Vleet.
—No; you have accused me before all the company of being a murderer, of having shot a man in Russia.

A tattered sheet of paper was handed by the defendant to the clerk, who read out:
"I was legally married to Maurice de Vleet on the 15th of the 9th, 1913." The complai-ant said it was in her handwriting and she wrote it in Dublin as "a bit of fun."
Her husband was standing over her.

PIECED-UP LETTER.

The husband produced a second piece of paper which he said was part of a letter he had found and pieced together. "Then you are a Sherlock Holmes as well?" asked the clerk, to which the defendant replied,
"No, but my life's happiness is at stake."

The second letter and a third which the husband produced were addressed to gentlemen, and one, it was said, made an appointment. Mrs. Brandon admitted having written them, but said the whole of the writings were matters of fun.

The Clerk: You will end your career in the Divorce Court if you are not careful.
You tantalise your husband.

The Magistrate: The case is dismissed.

3,600,000

Tall figure! But a simple calculation will show you that this is roughly the number of times that a 28 inch cycle tyre will revolve in a mileage of 5,000.

In other words, every part of the tread receives 3,600,000 violent blows during an average season's running. Is not this clear proof of the necessity for a wise discrimination in the choice of tyres.

You are safe in choosing
